

CULTS OF PHRYGIA EPIKTETOS IN THE ROMAN IMPERIAL PERIOD

The region of Phrygia known as Phrygia Epiktetos rarely features in ancient literary sources. For example, Strabo mentions it only eight times and in four cases, he identifies it as the Little/Hellespontine Phrygia<sup>1</sup>. With its six urban centres – Aizanoi, Nakoleia, Kotiaion, Midaion, Dorylaion, and Kadoi (the last one often ascribed to Mysia, as Strabo himself notes, or to Maionia, according to Ptolemy)<sup>2</sup>, – and their numerous inscriptions (Dorylaion alone boasts nearly 1000 published and unpublished inscriptions), it is a very attractive region for a student of ancient pagan cults.

The main city of the region was Aizanoi, an agricultural centre in a fertile plain, founded by the Attalids<sup>3</sup> on the upper course of the Penkalas River<sup>4</sup> (modern Çavdarhisar Suyu). The oldest pottery finds of Late Hellenistic and Early Roman times come from the cave of the Mother of Steunos (mod. Kesik Mağara) situated 3.5 km SW of the town, where, according to a local tradition, Zeus was born<sup>5</sup>. The religious life of Aizanoi was dominated by their particular cult of Zeus known as Ζεὺς Αἰζανῶν and Zeus Ἐζεανίτης<sup>6</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Strabo 2. 5. 31 (Phrygia Epiktetos part of Phrygia); 12. 1. 3 (Epiktetos one of the regions west of the Halys River); 12. 3. 7 (Phrygia Epiktetos same as Hellespontine Phrygia); 12. 4. 1 ('the so-called Phrygia Epiktetos, also called Hellespontine Phrygia'); 12. 4. 3 (identical with Little/Hellespontine Phrygia); 12. 4. 4 (position of Epiktetos vis-à-vis Mysia Abaitis and Bithynia); 12. 4. 5 (Epiktetos a purely continental region); 12. 8. 1 (Greater and Little Phrygia, the second one also known as Epiktetos); 12. 8. 12 (cities of Phrygia Epiktetos); cf. RE XX 1, 1941, s.v. Phrygia (Topographie), coll. 801–802 (W. Ruge). During the Bithynian-Pergamene wars in 184/3 BC Eumenes II won Phrygia Epiktetos back from Prusias I who took it from him probably at the beginning of his reign; it had already been awarded to Eumenes by the Romans according to the peace of Apameia (Polyb. 21. 46 .9; Liv. 38. 39. 14). Cf. Habicht 1956; Şahin 1986, esp. 136 note 39 on the political, not geographical meaning of the term Hellespontine Phrygia since the 5th century BC.

<sup>2</sup> Strabo 12. 8. 12: τοὺς δὲ Κάδους ἔνιοι τῆς Μυσίας φασίν; Ptolem. 5. 2. 21 (Kadoi part of Maionia, together with Saittai and Daldis); Pliny NH 5. 111 (Kadoi in the Sardian conventus); OGIS 446 (MAMA X 181 no. 1), from Kadoi: ὁ δῆμος ὡ Μυσῶν Ἀββαειῶν; Hier. 668. 10: Kadoi is Phrygian. Cf. IG XIV 1121 (Rome): Mysei Ab[b]aitae et Epict[ete]s | Μυσοὶ Ἀββαεῖται καὶ Ἐπικτετεῖς set up an honorary inscription for C. Salvius Naso, leg. pro pr. in the Mithridatic wars.

<sup>3</sup> There is a tradition that the city of Aizanoi was founded by Arkadians (Azanes from Azania: Paus. 8. 4. 3); Strubbe 1984–6, 261 note 41. The city was probably the minting centre for the Epikteteis and did not issue coins in its own name until the last third of the 1st century BC (they bear the inscription ΕΖΕΑΝΙΤΩΝ). The inscription SEG 45, 1721 (2nd/1st c. BC) containing the names Perdikkas and Ptolemaios yields additional evidence for the existence of a Macedonian military colony in Aizanoi. In the Roman period, it probably belonged to the conventus of Sardis, rather than the one of Synnada.

<sup>5</sup> Paus. 8. 4. 3; 10. 32. 3. The cave was identified by J. G. C. Anderson (Anderson 1897/8, 53–57). M. Schede started the excavations of the site before WW II and they were afterwards continued by R. Naumann (Naumann 1967).

<sup>6</sup> Ζεὺς Αἰζανῶν: SEG 45, 1711, 54–68 AD; MAMA X 10–11; Ζεὺς Ἐζεανίτης in SEG 54, 1276 of unknown provenance. In Latin inscriptions the god appears as Iuppiter Aezanensis/Aezaniticus. The city (or its territory) is called ἱερὰ καὶ τεμενικὴ τ[οῦ ?Διὸς] in a newly-published letter from Caesar composed and sent in 46 BC (SEG 59, 1479). See also MAMA IX 69. Zeus is depicted on innumerable civic coins, both Imperial and pseudo-autonomous. Epithets of the city and its people were ἱερὰ καὶ ἄσυλος καὶ νεωκόρος τοῦ Διός, ὁ νεωκόρος δῆμος.

The temple of Zeus of Aizanoi in the city's centre was built under Domitian (ca. 95/6 AD)<sup>7</sup> together with the huge temple square and its porticoes on top of an ancient settlement mound. With its 16 columns still standing, the temple of Zeus is the best-preserved Ionic temple in Asia Minor. It towers high above the surrounding area, being set on a high, vaulted platform. The excavated remains of the large central akroterion of the gable show a bust of Zeus on the E and on the W a female bust, perhaps to be identified as his Mother. The games in god's honour are attested as ta Deia<sup>8</sup>.

The cult of Zeus of Aizanoi is attested since the Hellenistic period when Attalos I and Prusias I donated lands to his sanctuary and Augustus later confirmed its asylum.<sup>9</sup> An earlier era is represented by his Mother residing in the Cave at Steunos<sup>10</sup>. The sanctuary at Steunos was excavated and the results published<sup>11</sup>: it is a large cave, with niches outside for votive offerings and a large cult statue; in the rock-face above the cave there was a carved throne and on the ridge behind it two circular enclosures/buildings (bothroi?). The cave was believed to have been the site of Zeus's birth.

Zeus of Aizanoi shared the devotion of local inhabitants with a host of other local Zeuses attested in inscriptions from the same region: they are Zeus Abozenos<sup>12</sup>, Zeus Anadotes<sup>13</sup>, Zeus Bennios<sup>14</sup>, Zeus Bronton<sup>15</sup>, Zeus Kikidiassenos<sup>16</sup>, Zeus Megas Menophilou<sup>17</sup>, Zeus Olympios<sup>18</sup>, Zeus

7 As evidenced by the recently published inscription on the architrave of the east façade of the temple (SEG 58, 1492 (92 or 94/5 AD)): [vac. Prior to the publication of this inscription, the communis opinio favoured a date between 126 and 157 AD. 9 The question of temple lands donated by the kings of Pergamon and Bithynia to the temple and the city is elucidated by four inscriptions on the right-hand anta-wall of the pronaos of the temple, all dating from the reign of Hadrian (MAMA IX P1–P4).

10 The cult statue of the goddess in the cave, mentioned by Pausanias (10. 32. 3), appears on civic coins (Roman Provincial Coinage Online IV 1686, reign of Commodus: turreted Cybele seated, l., holding infant Zeus, resting arm on tympanum; to l. at her feet, lion; above, three Corybants, each with sword and shield). Μήτηρ Θεῶν Στευνηνή also features in an inscription from Kadoi (Vermaseren 1977, 42 no. 122) and we possess a dedication to Zeus Bennios on behalf of the guild of κηπουροὶ Στευνηνοί (MAMA IX 49 = SEG 40, 1187) who are not necessarily connected to the sanctuary itself.

Olympios Kersoullos<sup>19</sup>, Zeus Sabazios<sup>20</sup>, Zeus Soter<sup>21</sup>, and two local cults whose epithets are only partly preserved (Zeus [--]eteos(?)<sup>22</sup>, Zeus ...genos<sup>23</sup>). Among all these local Zeuses, the latest ‘newcomer’ is Zeus Megas Menophilou first attested by the inscription on an altar decorated with busts of Zeus on the front side, Meter on the right, Helios (or Hosios and Dikaios) on the left face, and eagle on thunderbolt on the backside. We learn from this inscription that the cult of Zeus Megas Menophilou was founded by one Menophilos after he had been ‘exceedingly terrified’ ([κ]ατεπλήχθη δε[ινῶς]) by some event<sup>24</sup>. The inscriptions from the territory of Aizanoi also mention Apollo<sup>25</sup> (including Apollo Xyreos<sup>26</sup> ‘imported’ from Hadrianoi), Artemis<sup>27</sup>, Asklepios<sup>28</sup>, Athena Polias<sup>29</sup>, Dionysos<sup>30</sup>, Eleusinian goddesses<sup>31</sup>, Hekate<sup>32</sup>, Black Hekate (invoked in funerary imprecations)<sup>33</sup>, Helios<sup>34</sup>, Hosios and Dikaios<sup>35</sup>, (Chryse) Kore<sup>36</sup>, Meis<sup>37</sup>, several cults of Meter in addition to the Meter of Steunos (Meter Gonane<sup>38</sup>, Meter Es[--]<sup>39</sup>, Meter Kouaene<sup>40</sup>, Meter 19 SEG 56, 1436. Zeus Kersoullos is a god of a village (at modern Akçapınar) in the territory of Hadrianoi (I.Hadrianoi 2–8), who may have been transferred to the Aizanitis. The sanctuary of Zeus Olympios Kersoullos featuring in SEG 56, 1436 had 19 or 21 ieroi; all whose identities are known were freeborn, with patronymics.

26 MAMA IX 60. The same cult is attested in Hadrianoi (I.Hadrianoi 19–20), and the find-spot of MAMA IX 60 lies close to the border between Aizanitis and Hadrianoi. Apollo with and without lyre is also shown on local coins.

27 The dedicatory inscription on her temple dates from the c. 50 AD (SEG 45, 1708). The temple was built out of his own funds by the life-long priest Asklepiades Charax, appearing as a priest also in SEG 45, 1710, where his funding of the same temple is most probably mentioned. Artemis is depicted on civic coins with quiver over shoulder.

Oriene<sup>41</sup>, Meter Thea<sup>42</sup>, Meter theon<sup>43</sup>), Poseidon and Amphitrite<sup>44</sup>, Sozon<sup>45</sup>, and Theos Hypsistos<sup>46</sup>. Many inscriptions mention various members of cult personnel, such as eikonophoroi<sup>47</sup>, hieroī<sup>48</sup>, neokoroi<sup>49</sup>, archineokoroi<sup>50</sup>, neopoioi<sup>51</sup>, priests (Zeus<sup>52</sup>, Zeus Anadotes<sup>53</sup>, Artemis<sup>54</sup>, Dionysos<sup>55</sup>, Theos Hypsistos<sup>56</sup>, Theoi boulai – Zeus, Athena, Hestia –<sup>57</sup>, unknown deity<sup>58</sup>) and archpriests of the city<sup>59</sup>, prophets<sup>60</sup>, and flute-players at libations (spondaulai)<sup>61</sup>.

Generally speaking, the most prominent deity in the cultic landscape of Phrygia Epiktetos, the god who made his presence felt most potently everywhere, is Zeus, with, currently, about thirty distinct local manifestations/cult places attested by toponymic epithets and other forms of theonyms preserved in inscriptions and on coins. Most of these epithets are known from dedications originally erected in numerous rural sanctuaries scattered throughout the region. These inscriptions were set up by people of modest culture and modest means, as sincere supplications and offerings for the well-being of their families, their cattle and their fellow-villagers. Thanks to the toponymic adjectives appended to the theonyms, we learn of the existence of these communities themselves. At times, we are able to discern more, for example, that Zeus known as Zeus Dagoustes was actually Zeus Bronton Dagoustes<sup>62</sup>, that Zeus Biaderianos, protector of the community of Biaderianoi, was also honored as Patrikos and Sygenikos<sup>63</sup>, that another Zeus, addressed as Limnenos/Limnaios, was also Patroos for some of his devotees<sup>64</sup>, or that a particular Zeus known as Zeus Kersoullos was originally installed in a local sanctuary as Zeus Olympios established on the Mysian, not the Thessalian Olympos: this deity was first worshipped in the village of Kersoullos/on in the territory of Hadrianoi<sup>65</sup>. One inscription shows that a specific manifestation of Zeus Bennios was regarded as closely tied to his homeland by a devotee who made a dedication to ‘Zeus Bennios of his homeland Agrosta and Zbourea’: Διὶ Βεννίῳ τῆς ἔαυτοῦ πατρίδος Ἀγροστεών καὶ Ζβουρηάς<sup>66</sup>. In some cases it is uncertain whether we are dealing with a topographic or a functional epithet, for example, in the case of Zeus ex Aules<sup>88</sup>, where Aule can be a place-name<sup>89</sup> comparable to the Lydian toponym Νεαύλη attested in Hierokles<sup>90</sup> and in a geographic epithet for a Zeus Sabazios from the region of Philadelphiea<sup>91</sup>, or a common noun meaning ‘court(yard), colonnade, hall, atrium of the sanctuary, chapel, cave; enclosure/pen/stable/farmstead<sup>92</sup>.

From Hıdırlar 2 km E of Emremsultan comes the following inscription, possibly also dedicated to Zeus Sarnendenos (ibid. 1222): A: Ἀγαθῇ Τύχῃ | Θεῷ ἀρίστῳ μεγίστῳ ἐπη[κό]ω σωτῆρι ἐαντοῦ κ[ε]ιαὶ τῶν τέκνων αὐτοῦ καὶ πάντων τῶν [βο]ῶν Κάττιος Τέργος | εύχήν. We also have an attestation of the cult of Ζεὺς Σαρνενδῆς (SEG 44, 1056, area of Ağaçhisar Köyü, c. 30 km NW of Mihalıççık), identical with Ζεὺς Σαρνενδῆς. The cult of Zeus Sarnendenos has left traces in the territory of Nikαι (Iznik 2.1, 1128) and in Dacia (Ruscu 2003, 5, from Alburnus Maior, set up by a κολλήγειον; ibid. 16, from Apulum: Ζεῦ Σαρδενδηνῷ ‘Ροῦφος Ἄντιπάτρου ἀνέθ(ηκε)).

The functional epithets appended to the name of Zeus paint an image of the supreme deity in his local manifestations that presents no surprise: they define him as a rural protector and provider of crops and cattle par excellence<sup>93</sup>: he is Ampelites/Ampelikos ('of the vine')<sup>94</sup>, Anadotes ('causing the plants to sprout')<sup>95</sup>, Bronton ('Thunderer')<sup>96</sup>, Telesphoros ('bringing fruit to perfection')<sup>97</sup>, Thallos ('of the young shoots')<sup>98</sup>, and Tetrao[raios] ('of the four seasons'?)<sup>99</sup>. An unpublished altar from the Eskişehir Museum contains a new epithet of Zeus – Hekatostites ('who makes crops bear a hundredfold'): Ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ Χρυσάνθης, Αὔρ. Ζώσιμος Ἀντώ(νιος/νίου) υἱῷ Κλαυδίᾳ Αὔρ. Ζωσίμῳ β', Διεὶ Ἐκατοστήτῃ εὐχήν. This is the latest addition to a long series of dedications followed by epitaphs (or vice-versa), common in this part of Phrygia. New and hapax legomenon is the god's epithet derived from the rare verb ἐκατοστεύω 'bear a hundredfold', known from the Septuaginta (Gen. 26.12: Ἔσπειρεν δὲ Ἰσαὰκ ἐν τῇ γῇ ἐκείνῃ καὶ εῦρεν ἐν τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἐκείνῳ ἐκατοστεύουσαν κριθήν) <sup>100</sup> and some Christian texts.

As Bennios, Zeus is the patron of associations of his worshippers: the Graeco-Phrygian word τὸ βέννος (**bend-nos*) has the meaning 'association', especially in the sense of a local cult association<sup>101</sup>. Zeus is also Alsenos ('of the sacred grove')<sup>102</sup>, Aristos ('the best')<sup>103</sup>, Basilikos ('kingly')<sup>104</sup>, Dios and Ouranios ('heavenly')<sup>105</sup>, Epekoos/Philekoos ('the one who listens/attentive')<sup>106</sup>, Epimartyros<sup>107</sup> ('witness to one's word', the epithet used for Zeus already in the Iliad 7, 76), Euchodotes ('gran-

A special case is that of Zeus Prokentes worshipped together with Zeus Biaderianos and Ζεὺς ἔξ Ἀριστονίκου καὶ στρατιώτου in a sanctuary located at modern Keskin, some 15 km NW of Dorylaion<sup>123</sup>. Searching for parallels for this epithet, one encounters Apollo Προκέντης in an inscription from northern Mysia (Karacabey on the W shore of L. Apolloniatis, mod. Uluabat Gölü)<sup>124</sup> addressed Ἀπόλλωνι Προκέντη καὶ Ἀρτέμιδι. Προκέντης would mean 'one who traces out, designs, patterns beforehand', a fitting epithet for an oracle-issuing deity<sup>125</sup>. Another case is Zeus Saouazios<sup>126</sup>/Saouadios<sup>127</sup> better known as Sabazios, who was worshipped together with Zeus Bronton in an unlocated sanctuary, and by himself in the area of Avdan SW of Dorylaion.

Characteristic for this part of Phrygia are the cult centres whose founders' names, if not their precise identities, are preserved to this day as a part of the 'official' name of the deity established at their costs<sup>128</sup>. We currently know of the following seven local sanctuaries founded

According to Ramsay, the editors of MAMA V, xxxi and Zgusta 1984, § 1135, the epithet is derived from the place-name Rhyma/Rhymoi, less likely from the common word ρύμη 'street'. Cf. Apollo Agyieus, 'guardian of the streets and highways'.

P. Frei, who first saw the finds at Keskin and four inscriptions found there (three dedications and an epitaph), subsequently published one of the dedications with the following text<sup>137</sup>: Ἀγαθῇ τύχῃ Αὔρ(ήλιος) Ἀριστόνικος στρατιώτης πραιτωριανὸς Διὶ Πατρικῷ κὲ Συνγενικῷ Βιαδηριανῷ ὑπὲρ ὑγίας κὲ σωτηρίας μετὰ τῶν ιδίων εὐχῆς χάριν ἀνέστησεν τὸν βωμὸν. The still unpublished sacred law regulating the cult of Zeus ἐξ Ἀριστονίκου καὶ στρατιώτου, in view of the just adduced inscription, doubtlessly concerns the family cult of Aurelios Aristonikos, namely, the local cult of Zeus Biaderianos (re)founded by the praetorian veteran<sup>138</sup> who returned to his place of origin and probably served as the priest of the cult he (re)founded. At the occasion of the (re)foundation, the cult regulations were published and made available to all its devotees.

Finally, ‘imported’ manifestations of Zeus are Zeus Dagoustes<sup>139</sup> and Zeus Olympios Ker-soullos<sup>140</sup>, both from Hadrianoi, Zeus Kapetolios<sup>141</sup> (once worshipped together with Zeus Per-ses<sup>142</sup>) from Rome, and Zeus Perses/Person (Ahura Mazda)<sup>143</sup>.

In einer Kammer befinden sich, allerdings durch die Bauern stark gestört, grosse Mengen von Scherben, von denen wir Proben in das Museum von Eskisehir brachten. Scherben werden auch am Abhang vor der Höhle durch den Regen herausgeschwemmt, und zusammen mit den Scherben liegen dort ca. 3 cm lange Hörner aus Terracotta, offenbar die Reste von als Opfergaben dargebrachten kleinen Stierköpfen. Die grösste Überraschung war eine Inschrift, die ein Bauer im Tal unterhalb der Höhle gefunden hatte. Sie enthält eine Weihung an die Meter apo Speleou, die 'Mutter von der Höhle' (SEG 34, 1293). 172 Drew-Bear 1978, 41 no. 5 (Kotiaion, from the acropolis).

173 Drew-Bear 1978, 30 no. 3; there is also an unpublished inscription for the same deity from Erenköy mahallesi of Eskişehir.

174 MAMA V 150, Süpren köyü. From the same sanctuary comes SEG 44, 1037 dedicated to Zeus, Meis and Mother of Meis.

175 MAMA V 209, Nakoleia; cf. SEG 28, 1200 (b): "Ορος Κολιανοκόμις.

176 SEG 44, 1061. The meaning of this epithet remains unknown.

177 MAMA V 208.

178 Merkelbach, Stauber 1996, 33, no. 19, Yalnızsaray, Upper Tembris valley: Σύμμαχος Ἀντύλ[λου] κὲ οἱ νίοι αὐτοῦ Ἀντ[ύλ]λοις κέ Ἀλέξανδρος [κέ] Σύμμαχος κατὰ χ[ρησ]μὸν Κλαρίω Ἀπόλλωνι ἀν[έσ]τησαν. erection of a private altar for monthly ceremonies according to divine order-prophecy), Lykiōs<sup>179</sup>, and Xyreos<sup>180</sup>.

Local deities of Phrygia Epiktetos are obviously its river-gods: Hermos<sup>181</sup>, (Poseidon<sup>182</sup>) Sangarios<sup>183</sup>, and Tembris, the last one addressed simply as Potamos in the dedications from a sanctuary on the south bank of the river in the region of Beylikova SE of Eskişehir<sup>184</sup>.

Pap(i)as is another local deity encountered almost exclusively in and around Nakoleia (possibly two separate sanctuaries), and Kotiaion, and worshipped together with Zeus Soter and Herakles Aniketos<sup>185</sup>. He is mentioned by Diodorus Siculus (III 58, 4) as identical to Attis: τὴν οὖν Κυβέλην εἰς ἀκμὴν ἡλικίας ἐλθοῦσαν ἀγαπῆσαι τῶν ἔγχωρίων τινὰ νεανίσκον τὸν προσαγορευόμενον μὲν Ἀττιν, ὑστερὸν δ' ἐπικληθέντα Παπαν: συνελθοῦσαν δ' εἰς ὄμιλίαν αὐτῷ λάθρᾳ καὶ γενομένην ἔγκυον ἐπιγνωσθῆναι κατὰ τοῦτον τὸν καιρὸν ὑπὸ τῶν γονέων. According to Arrian<sup>186</sup>, the Bithynians would climb the hilltops and invoke Zeus and Attis as Papas: ἀνιόντες εἰς τὰ ἄκρα τῶν ὁρῶν Βιθυνοὶ ἐκάλουν Παπαν τὸν Δία καὶ Ἀττιν τὸν αὐτόν. The early-third century Christian theologian Hippolytus in his Ἐλεγχος κατὰ πασῶν αἱρέσεων<sup>187</sup> quotes a hymn to Attis where Attis is again addressed as Papas. The known dedications do not support this identification of either Zeus or Attis with Papas.

179 MAMA V 87, Ilkburun NW of Dorylaion, with a relief of two volwes below the dedication, and an anepigraphic votive relief in the Eskişehir Museum showing the god accompanied by two volwes.

180 MAMA IX 60, with a mention of a prophet. The cult is attested in Hadrianoi (I.Hadrianoi 19: θεὸς Ξυρεος, and 20: θεὸς Ξυρας), and the find-spot of the monuments lies close to the border between Aizanitis and Hadrianoi.

181 SEG 6, 80 (seen at Dorylaion), and coins of Kadoi.

182 Preger 1894, 313 no. 16; cf. Poseidonos phyle in MAMA V 182 no. 46, both from Dorylaion. On the coins of Dorylaion, Poseidon is shown with trident and dolphin, holding a foot on the river Tembris' head.

183 SEG 32, 1273, Ayvacık, NW of Seyitgazi; 1274, Topalyayla S of Kayakent/Holanta, Sivrihisar: dedication to Sangarios Basileus.

184 Mitchell 1982, nos. 1–10. Tembris also appears on the coins of Dorylaion, and Penkalas on those of Aizanoi.

185 Nakoleia: six small stelai recovered from the same site near Seyitgazi (MAMA V 213bis; ibid. App. 153–154 nos. 16–19; Ramsay 1884, 260 no. 12); CIG 3817 (between Dorylaion and Nakoleia); MAMA V 182 (Kuyucak); SEG 40, 1216, Karapelit, 33 km NW of Kotiaion; Körte 1897 b, 32 no. 8 (Bayat, territory of Amorion); MAMA VII 303 (Orkistos); TAM V 2, 1321 (Hyrkanis/Lasnedda, Hellenistic); SEG 49, 1555 (seven small inscribed stelai from Dağdere in the mountainous district between Thyateira, Attaleia and Gordos). ### Özet

Kent ve köylerde bulunan belgelerin sağladığı zengin bilgi nedeniyle Phrygia Epiktetos, Küçük Asya'daki, antik devir dinsel inançlarını ve kültür uygulamalarını araştırmaya çok uygun bölgelerden biridir. Bir zamanlar bu bölgedeki sayısız tapınağa ait olan yüzlerce yazıt, bölgeye yayılmış olan renkli bir dinsel yaşamın zengin bir tablosunu günümüze yansıtırlar. Bizim görevimiz bunları toplamak ve kendi orijinal kontekstleri içinde incelemektir. Bu makale, bu bölgenin yerel tanrılarına verilen ve bir yer adı veya tanrıının işlevi ya da kültür kuruluşu ile ilişkili olan tanrısal epithetler (sifatlar) üzerine yoğunlaşmaktadır. Tüm bu sifatlar, bölgenin Roma imparatorluk devrindeki sosyal ve ekonomik durumunu aydınlatan birinci elden kaynak olmanın yanında, yerel halkın inancı, umut ve korkularını anlamamıza önemli katkılar sağlamaktadır.
